Thaw in relations between Stanhope and fire marshal

by Carol Moffatt

A meeting last week between the Fire Marshal's Office and Stanhope council representatives has resulted in a thaw in the ice and water rescue issue.

Fire Marshal's Office Regional Supervisor Jim Coulson said the parties involved came to an agreement about trying to work things out.

"I think we can work something out. The concerns are legitimate but I think they can be addressed. We're trying to accommodate the appropriate training quickly and at the least possible cost to everyone involved," he said, adding it isn't a problem that can be solved quickly.

A story last week detailed the recent creation of a serious gap in emergency services in the county. In accepting a resolution created by Stanhope council, County Council asked that all fire departments no longer be involved in ice and water rescue attempts because of potential safety liability and financial burden.

As a result of the resolution and the resulting emergency service repercussions, Coulson quickly scheduled a meeting to discuss the problem.

The meeting, held Tuesday, was in Stanhope Coulson said, because it was Stanhope that initiated the original resolution. The meeting included reeve Fred Gardner, clerk Gerald Bain and fire representatives Murray Daniels and Jim Hicks. Coulson said he also spoke to Minden clerk Gary McKnight and to County Fire Co-ordinator Miles Maughan to keep them abreast of the situation.

Gardner said the meeting went very well and focussed mainly on clarifying the Fire Marshal's Office position on ice and water

Cardiff votes no on MVA

Cardiff Township has added its voice in opposing county-wide market value reassessment.

In a recorded vote all six council members voted against implementing MVA at this time.

If MVA is implemented, which appears increasingly unlikely, Cardiff would be one of the losers.

Under the proposed plan, the township would have to come up with an additional $50,000 in property taxes in 1991. All of the additional taxes would be raised from residential properties while businesses and farms would have their taxes lowered.

Reeve Thomas Elliott and deputy-reeve Dan Rivett will take council's message to county council when it votes on reassessment at the October 21 meeting.

However, MVA could be dead by that time. At least six of the ten townships in Haliburton must approve the implementation of MVA for it to pass.

Police juggling act: services, staff and funds

Number of officers stays the same despite a large increase in crimes

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Policing more than a million acres of real estate, much of it accessed by unmarked dirt roads, is the challenging task which faces the officers of Haliburton County's OPP detachment in Minden.

Fulfilling their mandate has become even more difficult in recent years, given the increase in population, increase in crime and a decrease in the number of constables assigned to the detachment.

In a recent interview with The Times, Minden Staff Sergeant Bill Elliott explained some of the circumstances which makes law enforcement in Haliburton County a "juggling act".

The problem starts with not having enough officers to do the job.

The Minden detachment is currently staffed by 22 constables, four shift sergeants, Elliott and civilian office personnel. Due to budget constraints, the provincial government has not increased the number of OPP officers in Ontario, so Minden's staff level has remained the same despite the increases in crime rates and population.

"Because of the hiring freeze, our numbers have not changed," said Elliott. "But we've been guaranteed that we won't lose any more men."

From 1987 to 1991, the Minden detachment experienced a 32 per cent increase in the number of calls for service. "That's just when somebody wants a policeman, not self-generated activities like pulling someone over for speeding," he said.

From 1989 to 1991, the county also experienced a 63 per cent increase in the number of criminal code charges laid by Minden OPP officers. Most of the increase is accounted for by more incidents of break and enter, theft and fraud, which could be explained by Haliburton's ailing economy, and high unemployment rate.

During the time when these increases in workload occurred, the number of uniformed officers in Haliburton County actually decreased by one constable.

Until recently, the number of officers assigned to each area was determined by the detachment's "authorized strength", which set out the staff level required to provide

Drainville reaffirms support for CHACE

Child care officials come away from meeting with MPP feeling inspired

by Andy Holloway

Victoria-Haliburton MPP Dennis Drainville pledged his support of CHACE Place in a meeting with child care officials last week.

Executive director of CHACE Place, Sue Valm, said Drainville reaffirmed his support of the centre after being given copies of letters from residents, questionnaires filled out by those who use the service and a copy of this year's budget.

"Dennis (Drainville) has always been supportive of the services that we offer to families and we came away feeling really motivated and energized," said Valm about the meeting with the area's MPP.

Valm said the key was the number of handwritten letters that Drainville received from parents who use the service. She says Drainville admitted the more letters he receives the more it shows the community cares about an issue and the more action he can take.

The meeting was originally supposed to occur after May Advocacy Month, but a pair of personal losses caused Drainville to postpone the meeting.

The meeting was also attended by the Lindsay and Peterborough enrichment centres and board members as a show of support.

Valm said Drainville has no problems with taking CHACE's concerns forward, but said she does not expect that Drainville's support will result in more government funds for either the day-care or the resource centre.

In the past, the agency has received provincial funds to hire a full-time custodian and a full-time staff member at the resource centre in Haliburton. This year, that funding was turned down.

As a result a special general meeting was called two weeks ago by the CHACE board of directors to find out where members felt the agency should direct its efforts.

Valm says 29 members and area residents came out to show their support and present ideas on how to keep all the services going.

"We thought of a lot of good fund-raising ideas and ways to incorporate volunteers into the day-to-day operations, but what we saw was that we were looking at stop-gaps and temporary measures to alleviate the dilemma that we're facing," said Valm.

"We found ways to come up with hundreds of dollars instead of thousands of dollars. Bern Berry (Minden reeve) really captured that feeling at the end of the meeting and made it clear to us that what we need to do is to lobby with the impetus coming from our parents."

All recommendations will go before the board of directors at the September meeting.

Stanhope decides not to act yet

rescue.

"They're concerned when a fire department withdraws services it has been providing," he said.

"(Coulson) asked us to reconsider and reassured us that with training and equipment the risks weren't so high," he said.

Gardner also said there was reassurance on Coulson's part that the Fire Marshal's Office couldn't force municipalities to be involved in ice and water rescue, and that accepting Level I did not mean a township had to move on to higher levels.

Details of Tuesday's discussions aren't being released until further consideration is given to the problem and some decisions are made.

"I'd like to get things going but it's just in the thought stage. I have an idea in mind but I don't want to discuss it just yet," said Gardner.

One possibility involves sending Haliburton County representatives to a water rescue Train the Trainer program scheduled for the Muskoka area in October but Gardner said he wasn't in a position to confirm this possibility.

Stanhope council members are expected to meet soon for discussions. Regular council meets next week, and County Council doesn't meet until October.

"(Stanhope members) were receptive but until we get it all together we don't know if we can pull it off," said Coulson.

Until any decisions are made, it appears the County Council resolution stands.

"I don't think we have to react and do something right away. It's not just (Stanhope's) problem and it shouldn't just be (Stanhope's) solution," said Gardner.

Police say even one more officer would help

The system has fallen apart in recent years and failed to address the changing needs of providing police services in the province. There was no method by which the numbers of officers needed in each area was reassessed and by last year many detachments in Ontario, including Minden, had staff levels which were chronically short of their authorized strength.

And because each detachment's authorized strength was a constant number, the system did not provide the flexibility to address situations like Haliburton County's, in which seasonal populations could vary from about 10,000 in the winter to more than 60,000 during the summer.

The system also led to misleading figures. At times, the Minden detachment has had officers who were away from Haliburton County, either on loan to other detachments or taking courses, but these constables were still listed as being part of the detachment's strength, even though they were unavailable for duty.

Elliott said the authorized strength formula has now given way to a "deployment model" of determining the number of constables at each detachment.

This model will calculate required staff levels based on factors like response times and number of calls. The figures will be reviewed every six months and Elliott said the new system will be much more fluid in assessing how many officers are assigned to each detachment.

The new system will also ensure that only those officers who are available for duty will be counted as being part of that detachment's strength.

The Minden detachment might also be in a position to take advantage of a recent decision by the provincial government to increase the number of OPP officers in Ontario.

For the first time in two years, two classes of recruits will be attending the provincial police college, which will result in 60 new officers being ready for assignment by December.

Although there have been no announcements of where the new recruits will end up, the government has said those detachments which are most in need will be at the top of the list. District 8, of which Haliburton County is a part, is in line to receive some of the additional officers, a number of whom may end up in Minden.

"There are nine detachments (in the district) which are flagged to have more manpower," said Elliott. "Some detachments are really working to the bone, but we don't have that problem."

He said the Minden detachment could benefit by having one more officer added to each shift.

"If the economic climate improves, we'd need less men. The rise in crime rate goes with the lower economic outlook."

The Minden detachment will also no longer have to endure a loss in manpower as the result of officers being assigned to other tourist areas during the busy season.

Some OPP detachments, like the one in Grand Bend, maintain minimal staff levels during the winter but draw on other detachments to boost the number of constables on duty in the tourist season.

"In the summer, in past years, they took men from here and sent them to Wasaga Beach," said Elliott. "We've been assured by Superintendent Eamer that won't happen. His philosophy is that District 8 is a holiday/resort area, and that's how it's being looked at."

Another situation which is affecting the detachment's ability to police the county is the transfer of criminal court cases from Minden to Lindsay, 75 kilometers away.

Last year, the province cut the number of days court was held in Minden from five times a month to just two, shifting the bulk of the schedule to Lindsay, where court is in session every day.

That means Minden officers who are required to testify have to spend an extra two hours on the road, and are unavailable for duty until their case adjourns and they return to Haliburton. In some cases, a constable can spend his entire shift in Lindsay.

During a normal month, 40 to 60 per cent of the detachment's overtime budget is spent on officers attending court. Last December it peaked at 72 per cent.

The reason for transferring the court dates to Lindsay was the inadequate facilities currently being provided at the Minden municipal building. The building does not have any secure holding area for prisoners in custody and does not provide barrier free access for people who use wheelchairs.

The government's lease with the township expires at the end of this year and Minden council has been trying to get someone from the ministry to look at possibly moving court to the newly-renovated community centre, but so far it has been unable to arrange a meeting.

One aspect of police services in rural Ontario which recently grabbed headlines around the province was the fact that many areas do not get police coverage 24 hours a day.

Haliburton County is one of the areas in which officers are not on duty around the clock. The Minden detachment operates from 7 a.m. to 4 a.m. During the three hours without on-duty coverage, an officer is on-call at his home.

While the prospect of not having 24-hour coverage has raised concerns in some areas, Elliott said there is no need to have an officer on duty in Haliburton County in the early hours of the morning.

"In 1990 there were 20 occasions when an officer was called out between 4 a.m. and 7 a.m., and there were 27 times in 1991," he said. "That averages to one call every two weeks, and a lot of the calls are for false alarms in residences."

With the present schedule it is neither effective or cost efficient to have 24-hour coverage, he said. "It would be different if we were getting thousands of calls during those hours."

There have been suggestions that OPP detachments schedule two 12-hour shifts a day and provide around-the-clock coverage, but Elliott said that would end up making it more difficult to effectively police Haliburton County because he would have to spread the same number of officers over a greater period of time. The end result would be five officers per shift, as opposed to the current seven officers per shift.

Under the present system, Elliott can design his schedules to provide the most coverage during times when it is needed most, such as Friday and Saturday nights when he can have seven men on duty at once.

"It's a juggling act," he said. "I put the men where they are needed most."

The introduction of community policing in Haliburton County has been both a benefit and a stress on local law enforcement efforts.

With community policing, one officer per shift is designated to a specific community, which has its own office. Currently, there are community officers assigned to Minden, Haliburton, Dorset, Wilberforce and Gooderham.

The other half of the community police equation is the increased involvement of residents in the provision of police services. In each of the villages there is a community policing committee which acts as a liaison be-

Civilian volunteers could be policing soon

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

To deal with the current shortage of officers, the Minden OPP detachment may soon be able to call on civilian volunteers to help out.

The provincial police force has been testing the concept of using trained volunteers to help staff offices in order to free up uniformed officers for other duties.

Sergeant Steve Adam recently discussed the proposal with the Minden Community Policing Committee. He said for the past six months the idea has been tested in the Barrie district.

"They've ironed out the difficulties and based on their experience, its in the process of being expanded province-wide," said Adam.

Adam, along with Staff Sergeant Bill Elliott will be attending a workshop in Peterborough this week to find how the program will be applied in this district.

One possibility is using volunteers to staff the community police offices in Minden, Haliburton, Wilberforce, Gooderham and Dorset in addition to the main detachment on Highway 35 in Minden.

"I don't know how far it's going," said Adam. "We'll have to follow the guidelines."

Depending on the outcome of this week's meeting, the detachment could start taking applications later this month and volunteers could begin as early as 1993.

tween the police and the residents, identifies problems relating to law enforcement and safety, and suggests possible solutions.

As people get used to becoming more involved, Elliott said, it will assist the police in performing their duties more effectively.

In Haliburton Village, which was the first village in the county to which a community officer was assigned, there have already been tangible benefits.

Community officer Ron Buchanan has enlisted the aid of a large group of volunteers to help him with search and rescue, traffic control and neighbourhood watches.

But because of the relatively small number of officers who cover Haliburton County, community officers often have to respond to calls outside their designated area, and time spent in court is also time not spent in the community.

"The busier a man is with enforcement, the longer he spends in court, like night follows day," said Elliott.

Earlier this year, the Minden Community Policing Committee held a series of meetings with residents of the village to discuss police-related topics.

One of the issues raised by the meetings was the fact that community policing has not met public expectations about the amount of time community officers would spend in the downtown core.

As a result, the committee recommended that the staff levels at the Minden detachment be increased so community officers could spend more time on the street.

Doug Campbell, who chairs the Minden committee, says the situation in Haliburton County is the result of years of negligence on the part of provincial governments.

"The staffing level (at the Minden detachment) was set a number of years ago and has not been kept up to date," said Campbell. "The population of the county has grown 20 per cent in the last five years, but the number of officers covering the county is less than it was originally set."

Because of Haliburton County's wide geographic area, Campbell said the number of officers relative to the population should be higher here than in other areas of the province. "We're being short-changed."

Any public dissatisfaction should be aimed at the government, not at the local detachment, he said.

"The police are being criticized, but it's not their fault. We have as few as three or four officers trying to cover the entire county at one time and that's a virtual impossibility."

While new recruits would boost the detachment's staff levels, Campbell says a recent graduate of police college is not the equivalent of an experienced officer.

For the first year, Campbell says rookie officers will have to doubled up with veterans.

"Just putting a man in a classroom does not make him ready to get on the road. You don't turn policemen on and off like a light switch, so it won't be a gain for a considerable amount of time."

Although police presence has been an issue in the village of Minden, Campbell says there are times when there just isn't an officer available.

"In order to get an officer on patrol in Minden for the Sidewalk Sale, at the request of the merchants, a constable had to be called in from his days off, and he could have been re-assigned if the occasion arose," he said.

While new recruits may provide some relief, the challenges involved in policing Haliburton County will not easily be overcome.

The backbone of community policing is interested involvement on the part of the residents the police are sworn to protect and that involvement will be the key to efficient law enforcement in the future.

Northern Victoria County reeves band together

by Jerry Grozelle

Working together for the benefit of all concerned isn't a new concept, but it is one that few politicians seem to be willing to embrace.

Somerville Reeve John Huke, along with Kinmount resident Mark Brelsford and Bruce Fleury, a cottager with roots in the area, are trying to organize a sort of coalition of townships for the purpose of working together for a common benefit. The proposed name for this coalition of municipalities is the Northern Network.

As Huke points out: "We've lost just about everything other than tourism so we have to try to promote it and promote the town of Kinmount and other towns in the surrounding area."

"There could be a lot of opportunities that as a group we could take advantage of," Huke said.

"There could be a number of ventures where if we were working together, instead of against each other,

we could put something together."

The trio has contacted the Reeves of Bexley, Laxton, Snowdon, Glamorgan, Galway-Cavendish and Lutterworth and has invited them to a meeting at the Somerville Township office on September 23. They are hoping there will be enough interest to get something going.

"It's a way of trying to keep everybody aware and abreast of what's going on (in the form of opportunities to encourage tourism and development)," Huke said.

The idea for a Northern Network was born when the three men got together to try to encourage either Trent University or Sir Sandford Fleming College to take over the vacant school in Kinmount and turn it into an adult education centre.

They haven't had much luck in that venture to date. Neither the college nor the university has responded positively to the suggestion.

Huke said that during their meetings two or three things came up that people weren't aware of. One was that Kinmount had been considered at one point for the prison that eventually went to a community in the Muskokas.

If the local people had been aware of the possible opportunity of a major industry with a large potential for job creation, there would have been a concerted effort to sway the decision in favour of locating in the area.

"We'll see what kind of a turnout we get (at the September 23 meeting)," Huke said. "It will be a gathering to see if we're all on the same wavelength."

One of the topics of discussion will be the flood plain mapping and how it may affect the surrounding municipalities. Another is the possibility of adjoining townships co-operating in the construction of municipal buildings and the sharing of those facilities when they are built.

Huke said that two townships that are side-by-side could cut the expense of erecting two buildings when the neighbouring two municipalities might be able to co-operate in the construction of one.

Other possibilities are the sharing of expenses of community services and recreation facilities.

"We'll look at anything that is going to save the taxpayers money," Huke said.

There is a general perception among the northern townships of Victoria County that they may not be equal partners in the County's scheme of things.

"It's almost as though sometimes the northern townships have been forgotten about. We feel that this (the formation of the Northern Network) is a way of trying to get things going a little better."

"I think that's the way we have to look at it. If there's something that may be going into Lindsay..., if we can steal it from Lindsay, we'll steal it from Lindsay or whoever else we can. We have to try to get things for the north. And the only way we can do it is by working together."

"So, we're tossing it out to the other Reeves to see if they show up and what their reaction is. I'm sure if we can get enough of them there'd be a lot of things come out of just the fact that they are meeting together."

Burnt River flood plan under attack

by Jerry Grozelle

An estimated 100 people gathered at the Burnt River-Somerville Centre on August 20 to elect a Steering Committee to monitor the Burnt River Flood Plain Mapping issue.

Eight people, representing five cottage associations will sit on the Committee. They are: Jim Boate, George Zeller, Bill Lambert, Gary Traill, Gord Connor, Penny Jones, Bill Potts and Wilf Dymond.

The Committee will act as a liaison between the County and the Township. Members plan to attend council meetings at both the municipal and County levels to keep abreast of any new developments.

"I think basically what we're doing right now is kind of being a watchdog for the property owners," Bill Lambert said.

Three days after the Steering Committee was formed, Lambert was in attendance at a County Council meeting. He came away somewhat relieved that the County isn't planning to rush into anything without a thorough study of the impact it will have on the property owners along Burnt River.

"They (County Councillors) are not in favour of it (proposed restrictions on building within the flood plain boundaries) as it stands," Lambert said. They figure it's going to have too much of an impact on the people, both socially and financially."

He said that County Council was planning to look into the liability if it should decide to turn the proposals down.

Members of the Steering Committee had expressed an interest late last week in having a meeting this past weekend to elect a leader and other officers and to decide what their mandate will be.

Us and us

It is interesting to reflect back to a year ago. The municipal elections were heating up, various factions were flexing their "muscles" and the community appeared to be irrevocably divided along lines that split so-called seasonal and permanent residents.

Well, a year has gone by, and along with it a municipal election which, perhaps for the first time saw a more balanced representation on the elected bodies. Since then, the fires which flared between the two faction have turned cold and a spirit of understanding and trust seems to have settled on the community.

There is no dramatic point we wish to make here other than to note how reassuring it is that given time and a little effort, human nature will lead us down the right path.

It hasn't been a great summer for our community. The weather did little to enhance the enjoyment of the cottage and the subsequent downturn has hurt the local economy. However, if there is one bright spot in the summer of '92, perhaps it is that factions within our community found they shared a lot more with their neighbours than they thought.

Now, if we can just get that attitude to spread....

This week's edition marks some important changes in The Times editorial department. Jay Kerr-Wilson, who has served as reporter and editor for the past four years has left this newspaper to return to school. He starts classes shortly at Carleton University in Ottawa in the political science department. We wish him well in his future endeavours.

The Times is pleased to welcome Russ Duhaime back to the editor's chair. Readers will recall that he served as editor of The Times several years ago. Mr. Duhaime has continued to live and work in the community during his hiatus from the paper.

Spirit of J. Edgar Hoover is alive and well

There's no doubt that J. Edgar Hoover will go down in history as one of the most loathsome toads ever to huddle under the skirts of Democracy. The man has been dead now for twenty years, but before that he ran the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation on a short leash for nearly five decades. He did some good stuff. He established fingerprinting as a cornerstone of police work. He greatly encouraged the use of forensic science in crime detection. But that hardly outweighs the evil the man wrought. He did everything he could to destroy Martin Luther King. Indeed, he smeared every Civil Rights spokesman who dared to challenge the Jim Crow status quo. He dispatched agents to investigate any public figure to the left of Attila the Hun. He kept files on politicians right up to and including the Kennedys. And he wasn't shy about letting public figures know that he had dossiers on the skeletons in their closets.

Dead for twenty years — and still the slime of his foul machinations oozes out onto the pages of our press. FBI records released last month show that Hoover kept a secret file on Sammy Davis Jr., of all people. Why? Hoover's file identifies Davis as 'a black nationalist' engaged in 'questionable activities'. Such as? Well, such as being married to Swedish actress Mai Britt, for one thing.

She's white, you know.

Another damning indictment that appears in Davis's FBI file reveals that during a 1967 benefit for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the entertainer went on record as saying "all races must learn to live together in a peaceful manner."

Hell, hanging's too good for a troublemaker like that.

One would like to think that such outrageous red neck tyranny died when Hoover bit the dust in 1972, but recent revelations from California show that the pinched and ugly spirit of J. Edgar is alive and well in the nineties.

Former wardens call for reason in hospital debate

Editor:

As past wardens of Haliburton County it is disturbing to note that certain elements of a so-called Planning and Development Committee are placing self interest ahead of the sole purpose for which the committee was formed.

We still feel a very profound sense of responsibility for the stewardship of this Council and for that reason we are compelled to set the records straight so that the course they follow will allay any fears that they are a divisive entity rather than having a unifying effect on the County as a whole.

First of all let's assure a certain member or members that there was a Long Care Study completed in 1985. It was requested by St. Joseph's Hospital and carried out by the District Health Council over a period of 10 months. This study looked at all of the options including the possibility of adding beds to the Minden Hospital. The age and condition of the hospital building left no alternative but to place the emphasis on an addition to the Haliburton Hospital.

From the study of 1985 St. Joseph's Hospital requested that a fund raising committee be formed for the purpose of raising our share of the funding required to complete the project. We raised more than double our objective and every contributor was fully aware that this money would be applied toward the cost of building an 18-bed addition to the Haliburton Hospital. The good will engendered by this committee, and its success in raising the required funds, completely overwhelmed the top executives of St. Joseph's Hospital as well as both of our members of parliament. There was never anything attempted in this County that contributed more toward bringing the people closer together and spirits were never higher because our common goal was to provide continuing care for the people of Haliburton County.

What has happened?

The government decided they had to squirm out of the commitments they had made for similar projects all over the province. They called it a "new direction for long term care". The Minister of Health was given instructions to scrap the original plans once and for all so she appointed committees, held dozens of meetings and carried out expensive studies. This is still going on so we have to ask ourselves, "What has been accomplished in all those years?" The answer is, not a damn thing.

We implore this committee to forget about their ego-trips and petty tug-of-war and get on with the job of making some good concrete decisions so that you can help to provide much needed facilities for our people. The spin-off in mutual trust and understanding will restore the sense of good neighbourliness we used to enjoy. Without this our wonderful County will have lost its soul.

Let's put service above self and join hands to complete the 18-bed addition to the Haliburton Hospital and then return the same effort for a similar facility in Minden when the time is appropriate.

We do not like the under-current of divisiveness that is sweeping across the County and we beg your participation in correcting a potential rift among two caring communities.

Local fire departments need more public support

Editor:

In Carol Moffatt's very well-written article regarding the ice/water rescue by municipal fire departments she states the Ministry of Labour charged the Fire Chief with negligence in terms of inappropriate training and the failure to take proper precautions.

In the same article she states a Fire Marshal sponsored training program is to be offered and our illustrious council member Murray Daniels won't agree to let the men attend the training course. As their council representative I should think this is what he would be fighting for.

Does he attend their meetings or discuss concerns with them? Did I miss something here? When did he become the reeve?

My understanding from the article is that Reeve Fred Gardner has some genuine concerns, yet it did not sound like his decision was carved in stone. The Stanhope fire department already have the basic necessary equipment. Surely the training offered by the Fire Marshal for Training the Trainer should be the next step. I would hope that when the meeting is held next week by Jim Coulson of the Fire Marshals Office our members of council will attend with an open mind.

Members of the Stanhope fire department are already among the best-trained in the county. They also have two professional fire-fighters in the department as well, one of whom is the Fire Department's Training Officer.

We have already lost two sons through tragic accidents. Every time the pager goes off in this house we worry we could lose another. It is because the department has a dedicated Fire Chief and Deputy Fire Chief who make it their business to know their men are properly trained that the men do not take unnecessary risks.

Council worries about a possible lawsuit and well they should. Surely the township must carry liability insurance against such a possible suit. This lawsuit will be more likely to come from a family who lost someone because the fire department was not allowed to respond than from a family because they did respond.

There are many people in this township that owe their lives to these men from many different types of rescues, like cars that have gone over St. Peters Road Bridge after missing the sharp corner, or the accident waiting to happen to the many young people that jump from this same bridge.

It is time the residents of this township got behind these men and give them the support they need. Let your council member know how you feel. If you fail to support these men on this issue then it could be you or your child they will have to watch die.

Surprise: someone does support market value

Editor:

I am extremely disappointed at council's decision on market value assessment. I feel that there could be no other outcome for this since three of our council members were elected by the local cottage associations and the deputy reeve resides on Minden Lake.

It's ironic that a council member attends the Business Improvement Area meetings when adopting MVA would be more helpful. As a business, my taxes would go down. This would be a positive step for all business ventures in this county, and indeed the province, especially in these recessionary times.

As a member of the business community, I feel I pay more than my fair share of taxes.

These tax dollars help pay for the environmental studies and clean-up of the lakes in our county, as well as the fish stocking programs, the acid rain testing, etc.

My taxes amount to 1.5 times more than a residential property. There is a realty tax and then another one-half of the realty tax is a business tax. Is that fair?

spies.

The unit's job: to follow, tap the telephones of, and otherwise maintain surveillance of a host of "potential threats".

What kind of threats — Saddam Hussein? Manuel Noriega? Charlie Manson types?

Would you believe Robert Redford? Connie Chung? Tommy Lasorda????

Robert Redford makes movies. Connie Chung reads newscasts on television. Tommy Lasorda, for crying out loud, manages the Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team.

What threat could they pose to the peace and safety of the citizens of Los Angeles?

Well, Intelligence is a quirky business. The L.A. Police also kept tabs on every single member of the L.A. City Council. They hadn't done anything illegal, but the cops spied on them anyway.

After the beating of Rodney King, police chief Daryl Gates was fired. The next day, he was miraculously reinstated.

By the Los Angeles City Council. Says Ivan Goldman, author of the aforementioned book: "They (the police) were spying on the entire city council. They had stuff on the whole council."

Lest you think overzealous police work is an American disease, let me direct your attention to a couple of RCMP "dirty trick" initiatives used against Quebec separatists back in the late '70s. Their mission according to the Globe and Mail: "to spread the use of 'disruptive tactics'". The Mounties targeted 'dangerous' people and got them fired from their jobs, broke up their marriages by planting false evidence of marital infidelity, damaged their cars and carried out a number of break-ins and thefts."

These are public servants we're talking about. I wonder if they thought they were doing that for you and me? I wonder what they're up to this week?

Big Buddy, more than just a friendship

Helping youngsters cope with life, called satisfying

by Andy Holloway

Sean and Shane are like any other strong friendship team, they know each other's jokes, they have shared similar experiences and they talk on the sly when attention shifts away from them.

Sounds like the usual school yard friendship, but Shane Burch is a 23-year-old university student while Sean is 15 and just entering high school - Shane is Sean's Big Buddy in more than just name alone.

Burch is the first Big Buddy to come out of a new Parent Support Services (PSS) program designed to give youngsters a role model when one is lacking in the home. The program is similar to Big Brothers and in fact PSS went to Big Brothers for information on how to set up their own program says Bonita Conroy, a volunteer coordinator trainee at PSS.

Conroy says the two programs share the same focus, namely on friendship and rapport. However, Big Buddies is an exclusive program of PSS. One of the reasons the two are different is because there is less funding for education programs available. Big Buddies is a little more flexible than its national counterpart. Big Buddies is also open to both male and female children and adults.

A more important reason is that Big Buddies is but one of several programs PSS has in place. PSS also supplies volunteer drivers, baby-sitters, tutors, part-time office workers and host families.

Becoming a Big Buddy was a natural step for Burch because he had been involved with PSS before and had a Big Brother when he was younger.

"When I was 11-years-old, I had a Big Brother because my father had passed away and the things my Big Brother did with me I've kind of carried them on, like squash and photography," says Burch.

Sean also had a Big Brother when he was 10-years-old and says that the experience was not a great one because there were a lot of disagreements. However, Sean says he still wanted to give it another try and with Burch found a perfect match.

The relationship, which Sean says started out a little shaky because Burch seemed a bit nervous, soon blossomed into an equal partnership rather than one of leader and follower.

"I find him to be more like an older brother," says Sean summing up the relationship. "I've learned a lot about friendships. I feel like he's giving to society what he took out of it."

While Sean gets a role model and an older friend,

Bonita Conroy is a volunteer coordinator trainee who helped match the pair at Parent Support Services, a support group for parents in Haliburton.

Burch says he gets to act like a kid again.

"I got to do the things I wouldn't have done otherwise. I probably wouldn't have gone fishing, go-carting or fishing and I had a hell of a time doing it," says Burch about his summer activities with Sean.

Some of the other things the two did included skateboarding, a high school orientation trip and of course girl watching. Even the weather seemed to hold out for them.

Friendship a two-way street in that the days that we've gone out it hasn't rained," says Burch.

Burch says the quieter surroundings of Haliburton County is an advantage rather than a hindrance because the program is based on friendship and not spending money.

"This area lends itself easily to a one-on-one relationship. There isn't much noise and you don't have to get on a bus to go somewhere."

Conroy says Burch was encouraged not to spend a lot of money because a lot of activities where people can get to relate to each other, like fishing or hiking, are free. Sean says he estimates Burch spent about $50 during the entire summer.

There is a growing list of request for Big Buddies in this county says Conroy. A lot of them are from working single parents, but Conroy says there are no stipulations and that any family that needs help or is in a stressful situation can apply to the program.

However, there is a lack of Big Buddy volunteers despite the fact Conroy knows there are a lot of people who would do a good job.

Like Big Brothers there are a number of requirements and hurdles to go through to become a Big Buddy. There are two interviews which can last for a total of four hours, references are checked as are the police and Children's Aid Society.

Burch did not have to go through the process as much because he had already worked for PSS programming activities for children who were emotionally, mentally or physically challenged or involved in a short-term family crisis.

"Our primary concern has to be for the children and the families of the community," says Conroy explaining the need for stringent controls.

As well, a Big Buddy has to possess certain character traits like the ability to be non-judgemental, a good listener and have a positive outlook on life. Perhaps the most important trait to have is a sense of humour.

"One of the things about being a Big Buddy is that they know how to enjoy life and have the capacity to be open and honest and have fun," says Conroy.

Sean agrees that having a sense of fun is very important to life itself.

"If we didn't have a sense of humour then everything would be dry and boring."

Another aspect of the program is that people have to respect the privacies of the families involved in the various programs. Sean was allowed to be interviewed only after consultation with his mother.

Burch says he was also given information about what Sean's likes and dislikes were so that he had an idea of who Sean was before they met. This also works in reverse as Sean was given information about Burch.

Sean says if the Big

Buddy program was not available he would have spent more time at the beach just hanging around or skateboarding, but Burch opened up his eyes to other things like photography and golf.

The only down side of Sean and Shane's friendship is that Shane is returning to school.

"It's definitely a shame that I can't continue," says Burch while Sean is taking a more philosophical approach, "I'm upset about it, but life is life. You win some and you lose some."

There may be a lot of friendships in the county, but so far there's been only one Big Buddy.

United Church Minister Ed Moll leaves area to return to his roots

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden's United Church minister is returning to his roots.

This week, the Reverend Ed Moll is moving to Brockville where he will assume responsibility for St. John's, the first church he ever attended.

"A long time ago, I lived in Brockville and the first time I went to church as a child, an older couple brought me to St. John's," Moll said in an interview last week. "We only stayed in Brockville 18 months, but there's a tie. It's not like going back home, but it's going to a place where one of my roots began."

Moll, who has been the United Church minister for Minden, Maple Lake and Carnarvon for the past five years, says the road to Brockville did not begin as a conscious decision to leave Haliburton County.

In May he received a call from the Conference Personnel Officer who, as Moll puts it, "is responsible for making sure there is a good fit between the congregation and minister", to inform him about the opening in Brockville.

Although he was not considering a move, Moll said to go ahead and put his name on the list, and began the task of evaluating his future.

"I considered my time here," he said. "Any time is not a good time to move. There is always unfinished business, things you would like to accomplish and people to care for."

But Moll says events seemed to suggest it might be time to relocate.

"At this time, for us as a family and for me as a minister, it was a good time to consider a move. We thought it over, prayed a lot about it and talked a lot about it."

Moll's wife Elaine had already resigned her position from Archie Stouffer Elementary School in order to spend a year at home with the couple's youngest Stanley before he starts school next year.

"We thought maybe there is something going on here in the great universe which is bigger than us," said Moll.

"We're not moving because it is bigger and better. St. John's is not much bigger than this charge, and there is only one church. It's different, not bigger and better."

As the time for his departure drew near, Moll began to realize the full impact leaving the Minden area will have, and what the last five years have meant to him.

"As I came back from a month's holidays to start my final week, for the first time I realized I was going and who or what I was leaving behind," he said. "It's sad to say good bye to people I've grown to know and work with."

Being a member of the clergy, as much as any other occupation, requires Moll to become immersed in the communities he serves and he says his time in Haliburton County has left a definite imprint.

"I've become a part of the community's life and pattern. I got to know the beauty and the underside, the way it celebrates and the way it grieves."

"I have been taught by this community and by this church, probably more than I could teach anybody, about what it is like to be human and to know God."

No one would be able to keep track of all the contributions Moll made to the people of this community during his five years here, but one of the experiences which stands out is his involvement with the leadership role he played in opposing the neo-Nazi skin head rally which was held in Minden on July 1, 1989.

Moll served Minden for the past five years

United Church Minister Ed Moll is leaving Minden this week for his new job in Brockville.

Moll was instrumental in organizing a community rally in the village in opposition to the events which took place at John Beattie's home on Bobcaygeon Road.

In recognition for his stand Moll, along with Times editor Russ Duhaime, was honoured by the B'nai Brith at a gathering in Toronto and was named as a Friend of the League of Human Rights.

In the wake of the racist gathering, Moll joined other people in the county and formed the Community Enrichment Forum.

The purpose of the forum was to establish ties with people from other cultures and religions to foster a better understanding.

"It's something I'll take with me," said Moll. "I've learned a lot about how other people perceive each other and how people can use events to try to bring about good."

Moll says the key to harmony among different groups is not to deny differences between humans but to take advantage of the differences in a cooperative spirit.

"We can't get along if we don't acknowledge we're different, find out what our own strengths are, build on our own strengths and work together."

"It's not that I'm saying I'm better than you are, I'm saying I have certain strengths you need, and you have certain strengths I need."

Moll says he will probably be able to fully appreciate Haliburton County once he's been away for a while, but it's still too soon for him to approach the subject objectively.

However there are some aspects of life in the county which have made an impression on him.

"I think we're becoming more aware of ourselves and our relation to outside factors that affect us. We're more aware of the web of life we're caught up in. That's good."

And living in a small, rural community presents its own challenges, especially for a member of the clergy.

He says there are two things which have to be addressed in a rural charge; the individual identities of the different communities within the charge and, along with that strong sense of community, the very strong sense of isolation and distance.

"You know people you meet at the post office and call the people in the IGA by name," he says. "The sense that you're known is, at times, uncomfortable."

"There are times you want to isolate yourself, and other times you find yourself needing that dance of community."

Moll has a farewell message for the people of Haliburton County.

"I'm going to miss you. You've been five-and-a-half years of our life as a family. Thanks in particular to the people who have taken care of our children while Elaine and I were working. They're the ones who have had their future in our hands."

And how will Moll respond when people in Brockville ask him what Minden is like?

"Home. Yeah, it's like home."

Steve Charity shows his winning form at a race in Atikokan two years ago. This summer Steve and his brother Stu won international watercross races five times, received two second place finishes and two third places.

'New kids' ride waves to watercross success

Team Charity grabs five first-place finishes

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Steve and Stu Charity, who were once called "the new kids on the block" by their competitors, have risen to the top of international watercross.

This year the two Fenelon Falls brothers, with the sponsorship of Minden snowmobile dealer Prentice-Berry Ltd., captured consistent top three finishes in their class.

Despite their last name, the Charity brothers didn't leave much hardware behind when they competed in this year's circuit.

Between the two of them, Steve and Stu captured five first place finishes, two second places and two third places.

Watercross is a relatively new sport which involves racing modified snowmobiles over open water. There are two events the drag race, which is flat out over a straight course, and the oval competition, which is a timed run around an oval course.

What probably bothers their competition most about the brothers' success is the fact that Stu and Steve have only been racing professionally for the past four years.

"They're giving us quite a bit of respect now," Steve admitted in a recent interview. "Actually everyone at the races are really friendly and willing to help out."

There are three sanctioned races in the circuit.

At the first race in White Rose, Wisconsin, Stu won the drag competition and Steve won the oval competition. The second race, at Grantsburg, Wisconsin saw Stu take the checkered flag in both the drag and the oval competitions while Steve placed second in the oval and third in the drag competition.

The only Canadian venue for the sport is in Atikokan, Ontario. At that race, Steve came in first in both events and Stu took second in the drag event and third in the ovals.

At the end of the circuit, final standings are determined by the number of points accumulated by the competitors during the three events.

On the basis of those points, Stu came first in the drags and third in the ovals and Steve came first in the ovals and second in the drags.

Although they bill themselves as "Team Charity", which also includes their parents Gord and Dawn, Steve and Stu have now become each other's closest competitor.

Steve says it's sometimes strange that the guy who he tried all day to beat is the same person sitting across the dinner table from him at night.

"It's tough," said Steve. "We don't talk about the techniques of the race in case it helps the other guy. We each have our own way of doing things."

But having said that, he added: "If I'm going to come second, I'd rather come second to Stu."

Outdoors group formed

Local hunters and anglers start association to protect the interests of resource users

by Andy Holloway

A new organization which will speak on behalf of the hunters and anglers who use the Haliburton Highlands is currently rounding up members in the area.

The Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association answers a need many outdoorsmen (and women) feel is necessary to protect the interests of the estimated 35,000 fishermen and 8,000 hunters who pursue their sport in the county.

Vice-president of the association Sid Cooper says a collective voice is more effective than a single person acting on his own.

"One person on their own doesn't have much of a voice," says Cooper. When changes are made sometimes they may be detrimental to hunting, fishing and conservation and if we have an organization with a number of members then we feel we would have a better voice in helping or upholding the issues that would come up."

One of the current issues that Cooper says needs to be addressed is the changing status of the McRae area in Algonquin Park. Both outdoorsmen and Dysart Township have fought for increased access into the park and to be able to use all-terrain vehicles. Park Superintendent Ernie Martel told Dysart council both proposals will not be allowed.

As well, there is a dispute to who has control of park land in the Clyde-Bruton area with natives, Dysart and the province all claiming the right to control what happens.

Natives say the area has traditionally been theirs and that they never signed it over to either the Canadian or British governments. Dysart claims that the land was given to the province in 1960 providing that it could still be used for traditional purposes forever. The province disagrees and says it has a public mandate to decide what is best for the park.

Other issues which Cooper says the association hopes to get involved with are the stocking of fish in area lakes, the new Outdoors card which goes into effect in January and to act in an advisory capacity when new fishing, hunting and arms control policies are reviewed.

Cooper says the organization will not only protect and promote outdoor sports, but will also take part in projects with the Ministry of Natural Resources and private landowners designed to improve the land, wildlife (including non-game species) and fish habitats. It will also try to educate the public about the need for conservation of our natural resources.

"We would like to, as much as possible, protect the lands that are left for hunting, fishing and other sports like archery and dog trials," says Cooper.

"We'd like to be able to help conserve those areas where that goes on and ultimately we're very interested in conservation because if good conservation is practiced then we'll be able to hunt and fish forever."

A meeting will be held at the Dysart Community Centre on September 13 at 2 p.m. for people who are interested in joining the association or who are just curious about it. At that time, a board of directors will be elected and people will be asked for their views on what direction the association should take during its first year.

Cooper says the association will be affiliated with the Ontario Federation of Anglers (more on page 13)

Hustlers move onto finals

Minden beats Lindsay twice to win series 3-1

The Minden Rockcliffe Hustlers have moved on to the Tri-County Fastball finals after beating Lindsay twice, including a default, last week.

Last Monday, the Hustlers beat Lindsay 5-3 to complete a 3-1 series victory. The previous night, Lindsay had defaulted a game to the Hustlers. Earlier in the series, the Hustlers had won the first game 3-2 while Lindsay won the second game 7-3.

It appears that the Hustlers will take on Fenelon Falls who are leading Bobcaygeon 2-1 in their semi-final, in the final round. On paper it would appear Fenelon should easily sweep the series. Fenelon's regular season record was better than Minden's (12-6 versus 9-7) and Fenelon outscored Minden 92 to 65 while giving up 30 less runs.

However, four of Fenelon's six losses were against Minden, including one that was defaulted because of a lack of players. The Hustlers were also one of the few teams to hit a number of home runs off Fenelon's outstanding pitcher Jeff Hutton.

As well, Hustler pitchers Brian Shaw and Jack Snell both pitched well against Fenelon giving up a combined total of only 14 runs in the six games. Snell pitched a dandy of a game during the two teams' final match-up of the regular season shutting out Fenelon 1-0.

The association is currently run by a group of nine interim directors including Cooper, president Ted Vasey and secretary Peter Hynard who also works for the MNR.

Membership in the association costs $30 for a single member and $35 for a family membership and Cooper says he hopes the meeting will attract about 100 people.

Making sure your kids are safe after school

by Andy Holloway

Peppermint Patty of the famed Charlie Brown comic strip may be one of the more well-known of the so-called latch-key generation, but the reality of it is much more disturbing.

More and more families are headed by single working parents or two working parents and so kids are left alone after school to wander around or sit at home watching television. Unattended kids can easily get into trouble, both of their own making and of others. In Canada, one in five children live in single-parent families.

However, there are two reasonable alternatives to this system. The first is the after school day-care program at CHACE place. The program has been running for two years and looks after children between the ages of six and nine after school is over and during professional development days. Children between the ages of 10 and 12 can also be looked after with special consent.

Executive director of CHACE Place Sue Valm says the program costs $6.50 for each day after school and $16 per full day. However, parents who qualify can get up to 80 per cent of the cost subsidized.

The children are looked after until 5:30 p.m. when a late fee begins to kick in. Valm says the program is a loosely structured to allow the kids to do what they want, but they do get a snack to tide them over until dinner.

"They might play ball, it's not really rigid. They've had a whole day of school so we try to have a balance of some structure and some free time," says Valm.

Valm says there has been a push for resource centres to have "warm lines" so children left on their own have a human contact when their parents are not readily accessible. However, she says this kind of situation is a "catch-22."

"Is having a warm line providing consent for parents to leave children under the age of 11-years-old at home unattended," she asks.

If you are going to leave your children at home then the other alternative is to street proof your children and help them prepare for emergencies like power failures and snow storms.

Every family should have an emergency plan which could be as simple as contacting a neighbor and creating a support network.

Children should know what is expected of them in times of emergency and should also be allowed to contribute their own ideas to give them a feeling of self-worth.

Emergency Preparedness Canada has also prepared a list of items that should be kept on hand at all times.

Everyone in the family should know where the items are kept and how to operate them.

Emergency supplies: battery powered radio, flashlight and extra batteries, a first-aid kit, extra clothing and sleeping bags

Equipment: bottle and can openers, cutlery and dishes, fuel stove and fuel, waterproof matches and plastic garbage bags

Evacuation kit: first-aid kit, flashlight, radio and spare batteries, food, clothing, blankets and sleeping bags, medications, important papers and cash

Food: every family should have an emergency supply of food and water on hand that will last at least three days, canned foods and freeze-dried products are good to have on hand as are biscuits and crackers

Water: it is important to remember that each adult needs a minimum of one litre of water per day so plan accordingly. Water should be stored in tightly covered containers and changed once a month. Canned soft drinks and fruit juices can also be set aside.

Easy riders

Two differing impressions are reflected in the faces of these children as they take their turns on a ride at the Kinmount Fair. The midway proved to be as popular as ever this year, with a special section featuring children rides.

Hamming it up

Minden amateur radio club contacts Canada and beyond

While nearly everybody debates the unity of Canada a group of local ham operators decided to do something about it.

The Minden Amateur Radio Club decided to say "Happy Birthday Canada" by contacting as many people in Canada from coast to coast as possible on Canada Day.

All ten Canadian provinces were contacted and the North-West Territories, but no one in the Yukon could be contacted. In all, 39 contacts were made including nine from outside of Canada.

All contacts were made by voice or by Morse code between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Four operators took about two hours each and used standard amateur radio transmitters and receivers at about 100 watts.

The list of contacts that the club reached on Canada Day is as follows:

Bridge building

Work on the St. Peter's bridge in Stanhope Township is continuing. Workmen were completing the forms for the abutments last week, with the cement pour expected late last week or early this week. After the concrete is set, the gap will be spanned and work will begin on the bridge deck. The new bridge will be at grade level and two lanes wide. Barring major setbacks, it is expected the new bridge will be opened in October.

Local business sponsors watercross team to success

The competition between the brothers has also gained notoriety on the race circuit. One of the disk jockeys who provides music during the races, makes a point of speculating on "which Charity will win" at the start of races.

For Team Charity, the sport of watercross racing has become a family affair. Dawn and Gord accompany their sons to the races, capture the events on video and act as a support crew.

During the course of a summer, the family puts 12,000 kilometers on their vehicle and drives all night to the different venues to avoid traffic.

The Charities have a citizens band radio in their car and towing snowmobiles down the highway in the middle of summer night has prompted more than one curious inquiry from the truckers they pass.

Two weeks ago, the family woke up on a Saturday morning and had breakfast in their own home for the first time since May.

The sponsorship of Prentice-Berry helps the brothers get their machines ready for the summer, and pays for repairs during the season. Steve is working for Prentice-Berry, building modular homes in the summer and working on snowmobiles in the winter. The Oshawa-based Used Parts Plus has also become a sponsor of the team.

Despite their outstanding season, Stu and Steve are still looking to improve their record when next year's season rolls around, but for now it's time to pack up their watercross machines and get out their winter snowmobiles.

If persistence is the key to successful gardening, these plants must be flourishing under the constant care of their 24-hour gardener. This mannequin can be found tending the flower beds on Highway 121 just south of County Road One.

Bugs imported to help in loosestrife battle

A major breakthrough in the battle against purple loosestrife came this summer when Agriculture Canada announced the approval of three European insects for release in this country. The imports were selected from an initial group of 120 European insects known to feed on the purple loosestrife plant.

The registration is the result of a half million dollar research program which has been underway in the United States for several years. The goal of the ongoing program is to identify biological agents which feed on the purple loosestrife plant but do not affect any native North American plants. The Canadian government has served as an advisor to the research, and has closely monitored the environmental safety of releasing exotic insects on this continent. By participating in, and accepting the results of the American work, Ag Canada has saved the expense of duplicating the same biological research on this side of the border.

Ag Canada researcher Rosemarie DeClerck-Floate explains, "The three insect species have narrow host ranges. Their release in Canada will have no adverse effect on the native flora and fauna, but will benefit them through an increase of diversity in wetland habitats. All three species have first undergone screening in Europe and have been approved because of their high host specificity."

Ducks Unlimited Chief Biologist Terry Neraasen says the biological agents will be important tools in the fight against purple loosestrife.

"We don't expect the insects to totally eliminate the weed from any of the infested sites. They will feed on the purple loosestrife plants to the extent that the plants are reduced to a more acceptable level. Native vegetation will then start to return to these wetlands. Once a more natural balance in vegetation is achieved, wildlife populations will begin to return to normal levels. But it's not going to happen overnight. Biological control is a long-term process, and it's only one means of dealing with the problem. The groups involved in this program are also waiting for the registration of more biological agents plus an environmentally safe herbicide."

Importation of the first batch of insects is being funded by Ducks Unlimited, the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources and the Manitoba Purple Loosestrife Committee. The insects consist of two leaf-eating beetles and one root-eating weevil. Quarantine, propagation and overwintering will be at the University of Guelph and the Ag Canada stations in Lethbridge and Charlottetown.

Limited releases are expected to take place next spring in a few locations. These will be monitored closely to measure the insects' ability to survive and to perform in Canadian wetland and upland conditions.

1993 rent review ceiling set at 4.9%

The Ministry of Housing rent review guideline for 1993 has been set at 4.9%. The new guideline which takes effect January 1, 1993 is simply that, a guideline. An amount by which a landlord can increase the maximum rent for a unit during the year without an approval from the Ministry of Housing. A tenant does not have to accept a rent increase at or below the guideline and may challenge an increase by applying to the Rent Review Board.

Ninety days written notice of any increase must be given and can only be raised once in each 12-month period, even when a new tenant moves in.

If you require further information or wish to challenge an increase, contact the Rent Review Board by calling toll-free Zenith 96000.

For assistance with a problem or a question that needs answering, contact your nearest Information Centre in Haldimand or Minden. Collect calls will be accepted from outside the toll-free area.

A busy South Lake summer

by Ken Brown
South Lake

Anyone with charcoal and a barbecue pit can cook a hot dog right! Well maybe, but not on Saturday, August 22nd at the annual picnic of South Lake Association of Cottagers and Residents. Budding gourmet chefs Bill Kelly and Lance Taylor, who are normally comfortable preparing a tangy Italian sauce or delicate veal piccata, tended fires, food and pots to provide a steady supply of delicious peaches 'n cream corn and steamy hot-dogs.

More than one hundred guests and family of SLACAR members gathered on the attractive shoreline property of Phyllis and Kevin DeGrace where sunshine, talent, creativity and celebration were the order of the day.

Our capable Association President Gerry Roy launched this annual soiree with words of welcome and drew attention to the attractive decorations prepared by our enthusiastic Social Committee. Gerry noted that we were actually celebrating another successful outing of the South Lake PIG's (Pitch in Gang).

Earlier that same Saturday morning forty youngsters and adults, PIGs', scoured the seven kilometers of roadside around South Lake. Equipped with gloves and plastic bags they picked up cans, bottles, plastic and other debris. Eleanor and Ray Lyner did a superb job of organizing this repeat civic effort to keep our lake and its environs in pristine condition. The boat patrol scooped up a modest amount of litter from the lake as well.

Road-side signs warned motorists of "PIGs" at work" and another crew collected the garbage bags for delivery to the Snowdon dump. Well done PIGs', you are a credit to the community.

SLACAR is grateful as well to a number of local merchants who support this programme with gifts and prizes so that South Lake can remain a tidy and nice place to live.

The "Pitch in Gang" went straight over to the '92 picnic where the theme this year was Hawaiian, with sarong, grass skirts and flower leis in profusion. It was difficult to choose from so many innovative costumes but June MacLeod took top honours for her creative outfit. Gail Rowett shepherded little kids, big kids and seniors through a variety of fun games while Peggy Kelly and May Marshall registered members. Hostess Phyllis DeGrace greeted her guests in grass skirt and flower lei which completed the transition from Newfoundlander to beach beauty.

Can you imagine, we consumed thirty dozen butter laden corn, innumerable hot-dogs and even 40 dozen donuts on that warm sunny day. Stir in laughter and neighbourly contact as a good recipe for a great SLACAR event on the shore of our lovely lake.

This summer, we did have good weather for each of the SLACAR scheduled events in spite of too much rain and low temperatures.

The annual meeting in June was a hot and humid day with a cool agenda.

The golf tournament at Beaverbrook Club in July had pleasant temperature - with hot competition:

The Canada Day boat parade in August had brisk winds - with bracing patriotism.

The South lake garage sale in August threatened rain but produced sunny bargains.

Come to think of it, summer whizzed past with hurricane speed.

If we had summer it was August 20 to August 24, sunny warm days with the highest temperature this year 29 (84.2). Average temperature was 3.2 degrees cooler than last August. Due to this the river temperature was 4 degrees colder than last August.

Technology can be disastrous

Future historians will look back on the 20th century as a moment without precedent in all of human existence. We have catapulted from agrarian, even hunter-gatherer, societies into a world of petrochemicals, computers, space travel and global telecommunications and economics.

As we careen towards a new millennium, provincial and national governments alike point to science and technology (S&T) as the means of carving out a niche in the international economy.

Yet as the potential of S&T is trumpeted (and it is truly awesome), little attention is paid to history which provides the only real experience with which to compare the impact of new technologies against the claims, promises and predictions.

The BBC TV series, Pandora's Box, makes the comparison powerfully. It looks at the history of innovations like DDT and nuclear energy, the use of scientific methods to manage society and economics as a predictive discipline.

In each case, the great promise of the enterprise becomes grotesquely distorted and sidetracked by the demands of economics and politics. And above all, each reveals our egregious ignorance about human behaviour and the world around us.

Today, hydroelectric megaprojects from Brazil's Plan 2010 to China's Three Gorges Dam, India's Narmada Dam and Quebec's James Bay Project, are predicated on a belief that huge hydroelectric projects are the key to industrial and economic growth.

Black Power, one of the programs on Pandora's Box, looked at a case study of a

Reflections

by David Suzuki

project based on that very assumption.

In 1951, a British colony then known as Gold Coast, became the first African nation whose citizens voted for independence. A charismatic leader, Kwame Nkrumah, was swept into power as head of what would become Ghana.

The country seemed to be a model for the rest of Africa - rich in natural resources, with its own universities, doctors and lawyers and led by a man with a vision. Nkrumah wanted to transform Ghana into a modern industrial state within a generation and believed it could be achieved through hydro power.

Since the '20s, British engineers had proposed to harness the Volta River. As a student in the U.S., Nkrumah had been inspired by the post-Depression dam projects of president Franklin Roosevelt.

Cheap electricity, Nkrumah reasoned, would light up Ghanaian homes and attract foreign industrial investment. Britain encouraged this vision with promises of technical and financial help for the project in return for cheap aluminum.

However, history deflected these plans in 1956 when Britain invaded Egypt to protect its interests in the Suez Canal. This costly venture forced Britain to back out of the Volta River project. But when Ghana became independent in 1957, the Volta River project had become a central element of Nkrumah's political future and vision for his nation's destiny.

Nkrumah turned to the United States and was encouraged by president Dwight Eisenhower to contact Edgar Kaiser who needed power for his aluminum company. Kaiser promised to build a plant in Ghana and this allowed Nkrumah to secure the largest loan ever given by the World Bank to that time to build the Volta River dam.

But Ghana's bauxite deposits could create a fully integrated industry, from mining the ore to processing it and manufacturing finished products. Fearful that a profitable aluminum industry in Ghana would be nationalized, Kaiser forced Nkrumah to agree to process American bauxite.

And once the World Bank loan was assured, Kaiser demanded electricity at the lowest rate paid by its global competitors. In essence, Ghana would be subsidizing an American company to process American bauxite to provide aluminum ingots to American manufacturers. But by then, too much was riding on the project for Nkrumah to pull out.

By the time the dam was completed early in 1966, Ghana was deeply in debt, its foreign reserves depleted. Ghana was also caught up as a pawn in the Cold War and two months later, a coup that some claim was engineered by the CIA, overthrew Nkrumah. He fled to Guinea where he died in 1972.

By the end of the '70s, Ghana had endured seven coups. The World Bank loan was repaid and the aluminum company profited, but the country failed to realize its bright promise. Instead, Ghana and Nkrumah seemed to fulfill all of the negative expectations of the industrialized world even though their fate had largely been caused by exploitation of the rich countries.

The BBC program barely hints at the considerable environmental and social consequences of the Volta River Project. But as Canadians debate the ecological and economic costs of large dams, the tragic story of Ghana resonates. As we chart our way into the future, we cannot afford to ignore the painful lessons already provided by the history of others.

Haliburton housing registry moves

The Haliburton County Housing Registry will be located in the Haliburton County Information Centre offices as of September 4, 1992.

The Housing Registry provides a listing of currently available housing throughout the county, as well as information about and assistance with, the landlord/tenant questions.

Tenants seeking accommodation should drop in regularly to check the new listing board in the Haliburton office of the Information Centre, located on Maple Ave., or call 457-2733, where a regularly up-dates housing list will be available.

Minden residents can visit the Haliburton County Information Centre office located in the Municipal Building, Milne St., Minden or call 286-4100. Landlords wishing to submit listings should call the Haliburton office.

The Housing Registry was initiated and implemented by the Haliburton

Social Action Committee in September, 1991. The Social Action Committee seeks to identify social service needs in the county, and to organize and facilitate action plans up to the stage of implementation.

Since the administration of new services is not within the Social Action Committee's mandate, the Haliburton County Information Centre has agreed to undertake the operation of the Housing Registry. The move to the Information Centre ensures that the much-needed services, provided by the Housing Registry, will continue to be available in our community.

Trent-Severn water report

On Monday, August 24 the Haliburton Area lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway averaged 70.2% of their maximum range of levels. This exceeded 1990 by about one half percent for that date. In 1991 the respective levels averaged 59.2%. The present levels indicate a near surplus condition and larger outflows will be released to attempt to contain the excess that may arise.

The remnants of Hurricane Andrew plus other precipitation crossing the watersheds of the Trent and Severn Rivers today (Friday, August 28) is resulting in major flow increases from the Kawartha Lakes. Their surplus condition has meant an increased flow in the Otonabee River from about 19 cubic metres per second on Tuesday, August 25 to 96 cubic metres per second by Friday. One further increase to 126 cubic metres per second would bring the flow to what is considered the safe navigation limit in river reaches of the Trent-Severn Waterway. Portions of the canal system would be closed if further flow increases were needed.

Kinark gets $338,000 provincial grant

Kinark Child and Family Services announces that it has received a Jobs Ontario Capital grant from the Ministry of Community and Social Services. The $338,000 will be used to construct a dining hall facility at the Kinark Outdoor Centre.

The Kinark Outdoor Centre is a year round facility delivering outdoor education and therapeutic recreation programs to a special population. Each year close to fifty different agencies from across Ontario come to the site north of Minden, in Haliburton County. The construction of the dining hall is expected to begin this fall. The new facility will be able to serve an even greater number of children throughout the year.

The Jobs Ontario Capital Program of the Government of Ontario is designed to stimulate the economy and create jobs immediately in those areas where unemployment is high. The project at the Kinark Outdoor Centre will provide both short term construction opportunities and at least seven long term program jobs for the local economy.

In addition to the funds from the Ministry of Community and Social Services, twenty per cent of the project costs are being raised through private donations. Imperial Oil of Canada and the Rotary Club of Minden have made major contributions to date.

The Kinark Outdoor Centre continues to provide positive experiences to many in need with the generosity and support of the local community.

Singing in the rain

Here it is the first week in September, "Where did the summer go"? Sunday Mary Guillemmin came to continue our reading. Thanks Mary.

Rev. John Burgess faithfully held Sunday evening Chapel Service and Alice Jones was our regular organist. Many thanks to both John and Alice.

Monday our regular routine was followed in the evening with movies shown by Pat Bradburn and Bess Parker. The pictures were on "Florida". Thanks Pat and Bess.

Tuesday morning Chapel was taken by Louise Leonard. There was a good attendance, and we thank Louise very much.

Wednesday we took a bus ride to Deer Lodge. Leaving Hyland Crest about 11:30 a.m. we drove to the lodge for our lunch, during which it began to rain.

It was still raining when we finished. We decided to have a sing along. In about 15 minutes the rain ceased. We boarded the boat and with periods of cloud and sun we went for the boat ride. Everyone enjoyed it immensely. There wasn't a dissenting

Senior League

by Winnifred Barnum

voice from anyone. One of the residents, Marshall Harrison said it was his first boat ride and he enjoyed it. There was a strong breeze but delightful. A very special thanks to the staff of Deer Lodge and the volunteers who worked so hard loading and unloading the Residents and tending to all their needs so graciously.

The volunteers were Bess and Fred Parker, Mabel Deacon and Helen Donnelly. Doris was the driver and person responsible for the whole trip, aided by Linda and Gregg.

Thursday was August birthday tea provided and served by the ladies group of Kinmount Catholic Church. The beautifully decorated cake was baked and decorated by Aileen Brown and the tea was served by Madeline Pearson, Ann Cain, Julie Pearson, Sue Pearson and Dorothy Milne.

The birthday girls were Irene McKelvey, Vera

Archer, Violet Thornett and Nora Groves.

As all Dorothy Milne's line dancers were busy, Dorothy entertained with skits from familiar songs by fake singing and dancing. Appreciation from Residents to everyone.

In the evening Lisa McGann called bingo for us. This was her last time as she is starting a nursing course. We wish you every success.

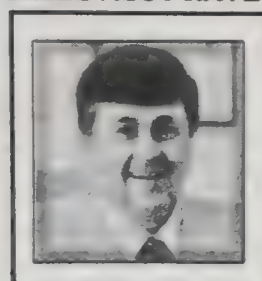

August 25, 1992, Vera Archer celebrated her birthday. Congratulations and many more Vera.

Happy birthday to Nora Groves on August 27, 1992. Congratulations and many more to come.

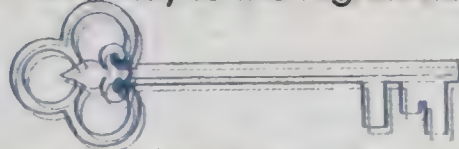

Friday was Happy Hour with the Grandfathers Four (Don Burch, George Smith, Eldon Deacon and Bill Payne) as the entertainment, with Doris at piano. The guests' needs were taken care of by Dottie Muirhead, Mary Guillemmin, Don and Ellen Holden.
